Many would agree that offering help to those needed is a significant action.
But is everyone willing to help?

There is no denying that both personal and team satisfaction result from such a behavior.
Another added benefit gained is respect towards people and the environment as well as the well-being of one's area. All of us, despite our age, ought to take part in any activity promoting common good.

Of course there are always two sides to every matter. Many believe that contributing to such acts is a waste of their time or that they do so having an ulterior motive in mind. Adding to this, self centered people only think of their needs and nothing more.

A true fact is that no area is perfect. Repairs, renovations of old buildings, playgrounds, schools and parks are some examples of what should be voluntarily done by each and every one of us. Any of the above would be beneficial to all.

No one owns the world but we all live in it so everyone's help is required. But why doesn't everyone help?
