Γ. ΠΑΡΑΓΩΓΗ ΓΡΑΠΤΟΥ ΛΟΓΟΥ

Sample answer

Hey, everyone! I've been part of a discussion with people from different countries regarding whether adolescents should spend their summer working, and to be honest there are some great points on both sides.

On the one hand, there are some benefits to such a decision. Firstly, teenagers can become more experienced in managing money. We can see how difficult it is to earn it, and learn to make sensible purchases. What is more, we can develop essential skills which will be useful in our lives, like collaborating with others, being responsible or dealing with demanding customers.

On the flipside, not everything is positive. To begin with, we are students, attending classes throughout the rest of the year. Don't we deserve some time off to relax and hang out with our friends? Additionally, another issue is whether an adolescent can undertake work-related responsibilities, like clocking in for work without delay, being on the move for several hours, or being in charge – and accountable – for the tasks the position involves. All this might stress us out.

Ultimately, the decision is personal. As for me, I think I'm better off just enjoying the summer sun and going out with my friends!
